

DECEMBER NEWS UPDATE

Hi Folks, It's been a very quiet month here in Extremadura. What with the Christmas holidays and a trip back to the U.K. to see family, then knacker my wrist on my return, for the first time in many a year, we've not managed a single day's fishing this month. What made it even worse was the fact that there were a couple of weeks with some outstanding fishing weather.

It's not all been bad news this month though, as Catch Carp Spain is glad to be able to tell it's clients that LEGAL NIGHT FISHING IS COMING TO EXTREMADURA IN 2009. This is absolutely fantastic news and will confirm Extremadura as the must fish location for carp anglers in Europe. We at Catch Carp Spain fully believe that with the introduction of night fishing we will see significant rises in fish caught and more of the monster carp hitting the bank which can only mean good news for our clients. At the moment we have no confirmed date for the rule change, but as it stands at the moment, it is looking like some time around Easter.

If you are a client who has already booked with us, but not yet had an e:mail to tell you about this, Catch Carp Spain will be tailoring new packages to take advantage of the new night fishing rules. These will be appearing on the website in the coming weeks, so look out for them. Don't worry if you've already booked an existing package, or are about to book with Catch Carp Spain, as you will be able to change your booking to any of the new night fishing packages as soon as they come into effect.
